From Angela M. O’Rand, SSS President

Happy 2010!

Let us hope that this year will be happier in some ways than 2009. I selected the theme of “Worlds At Risk” for 2010 at our meetings in 2008 when I had just become President-Elect. Little did I expect that within a few months we would find ourselves entering the unprecedented economic downturn of most of our lives. However, I selected the theme then because numerous social indicators that concern us as sociologists strongly indicated that while much evidence pointed to positive trends in such things as child well-being, gender equality, the management of some infectious diseases, etc., risks were spreading across all domains of daily life. Growing economic insecurities attached to risks from declining high school graduation rates, wage stagnation or decline, underemployment/unemployment, and financial loss were already documented in the sociological literature on educational attainment, labor markets, income and wealth trajectories, poverty rates, declining health insurance coverage, and shifts in pension coverage. And, while these changes have moved the management of more and more uncertainty to individuals, families, and households, families themselves have continued to be highly differentiated and volatile arrangements. Similarly, global environmental hazards have come close to home, while engagement in military actions abroad has introduced other new global risks. And, although global wealth has increased dramatically and populations are aging around the world, the quality of life for many populations has not improved or has deteriorated.

So we have good news and bad news to talk about in Atlanta. We visited the meeting site in November, and we are very excited about its quality. The Hyatt Regency in Atlanta is a lovely and comfortable hotel in downtown Atlanta within walking distance of scores of restaurants of all kinds and interesting landmarks, exhibits, and entertainment venues. Check out the report [The Southern Sociologist, Winter 2010, p. 8] of our Local Arrangements Committee chaired by Deirdre Oakley from Georgia State University.

Program Co-Chairs Don Reitzes (Georgia State University) and John Reynolds (Florida State University) report that we received over 500 individual paper submissions plus panel submissions including about 200 panelists. This is a very positive turnout with exciting titles throughout. The Program Committee is now at work putting the final schedule together. I want to thank them all. In addition to Don and John they include: Rebecca Bach (Duke), Anne Barrett (Florida State), Linda Belgrave (University of Miami), Charles Brody (University of North Carolina-Charlotte), Lee Clarke (Rutgers), Harry Dahms (University of Tennessee-Knoxville), Tanya Koropecj-Cox (University of Florida), and Pamela Wilcox (University of Cincinnati).

Three plenary speakers are already on our program. Evelyn Nakano Glenn of the University of California-Berkeley and President of the American Sociological Association this year—which will also be meeting in Atlanta—will present a talk on “Citizenship: Belonging, Recognition, and Rights” in which she will be comparing conceptions of citizenship and models of belonging. Two of our SSS colleagues will also be making presentations in plenary sessions: George Ritzer (University of Maryland) will present “Consuming America: What Have We Done to Ourselves? What Did They Do to Us?” And, Arne Kalleberg (University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill) will present “Socializing Risk: The Promise of Flexicurity.”

So, thank you for making plans to join us. See you all in Atlanta in a few months.
